Investing in these products involves risks. As these products do not offer protection against market fluctuations or capital guarantees, you could lose all or part of your investment. Market liquidity risk may accentuate the variation in the performance of these products. These market conditions may impact the prices at which fund managers initiate or liquidate positions.

The performance of the Sub-Funds depends mainly on the discretionary selection of securities within sectors, but may also be influenced by certain biases relative to the Benchmarks (sector allocation, geographic allocation, market capitalization, leverage, etc.). The indexes mentioned are not index funds; their performance is provided solely for comparative purposes for investors.
